WHAT'S NEW?

It's an age-old question that everyone asks. Sometimes it is simply stated as "What's New?" Sometimes it is more specific and may even be accompanied by other questions such as... "Won't you try this? It's new" or "Do you like it? It's new!" or "This is terrific and it's new!" But no matter how it is stated, "what's new" generally begins an exchange of conversation about exciting new things that are happening.

I personally love it when I am asked, "what's new" at The Arboretum. The list of "new" happenings is quite incredible. We know that to be a vital, interesting, and inspiring botanical garden and historical venue "new" is a concept that is important for us to embrace.

So, as we approach the end of 2002, a year that brought many new programs and events to The Arboretum, and begin to share with you in this newsletter some of our new plans for 2003, the latest in "What's New" at The Arboretum is an appropriate subject for me to share with you.

On September 8th, we inaugurated a new "end of the summer" event. Volunteer Gretl Mulder and her fun loving, hardworking committee and Sylvia Guerrero, Director of Special Events, hosted a benefit dinner and dance under the stars. A new first, The Queen Anne Cottage was open for this special evening. There were many newcomers, great food, music and even the weather cooperated. Discreetly placed mood lighting (even luminarias) helped to create the magic of the evening. Eric Haskell, a new member of our Advisory Board, was our incredibly entertaining Auctioneer. To say we all had a very good time is an understatement. If you were not able to join us for the event, see page 6 for highlights. We look forward to this new benefit evening having a long future at The Arboretum.

We are continuously developing corporate sponsorships and collaborations with "new" groups, and putting refreshing new twists on our on-going collaborations. In past years, Monrovia Growers has traditionally supported specific Arboretum events. We are now in talks regarding a new permanent garden venue to display Plant Introductions, featuring classic and new introductions of this renowned local company, as well as historic introductions of The Arboretum.

We have begun to discuss a long-term relationship with Rainbird, the world's largest producer of irrigation equipment. What's new for us in the future with Rainbird is the possibility of a new irrigation system to replace our mostly manually operated, inefficient and often ineffective existing "aged" system. This will not only enable us to use our staff time in other areas, but also enable us to save more than 20% on the water we use each year.

We also look to both companies to participate in our educational offerings, of which 2002 saw many new classes and workshops, as will 2003. Throughout this newsletter and calendar, many of our new educational offerings are featured.

The County of Los Angeles' Parks and Recreation Department has arranged for us to receive two new electric vehicles. Donated by Ford Motor Company, these new 4-seat vehicles are approved for surface street use and will help in removing more of the fossil fuel dependent equipment from our now better and cleaner facility.

New also relates to our new Board of Trustees members—Walt Garrison, Alan Tekerlek, Frank Chang, and Mickey Segal. These inspiring individuals will bring new perspectives, new contacts, and new volunteers to help introduce and execute many of the new and developing facilities and programs identified in our new conceptual long-range plan.

So, as we close one year out and look to a new year that is quickly approaching, I invite you to stop by my office the next time you visit The Arboretum and ask me "What's new?" I am certain I will have many more new things to talk to you about! Hopefully you will tell me of a new event, lecture, workshop or seminar you have attended at The Arboretum.

Season's Greetings and Happy NEW Year.

Peter C. Atkins, CEO

DEAR ARBORETUM FRIENDS,

You won't be surprised to know that a lot is going on at The Arboretum these days — some of which is described or alluded to elsewhere in this newsletter. We're all working hard on many fronts to further our development as one of the world's truly wonderful arboreta and botanic gardens, and we're making excellent progress.

We welcome and appreciate your interest, involvement and support, and your suggestions, comments and questions at any time.

With our sincere thanks and best wishes,
George Brumder

KAVA-KAVA— AN ETHNOBOTANICAL TREASURE

Among the many ethnobotanical treasures in The Arboretum's collections is the plant that has been central to the social and ceremonial life of the Pacific Islanders for millennia.

This plant is known under various names including kava-kava, kava, or 'awa (pronounced ava), as it is known in the Hawaiian Islands. The same name is used for the beverage prepared from the plant.

Botanically, kava is Piper methysticum. It is placed in the pepper family (Piperaceae) (not to be confused with chili peppers in the nightshade family) to which belongs the beloved black pepper. It is an evergreen shrub with knobby, jointed stalks which can grow eight to ten feet tall; leaves are large and heart-shaped.

This species is known only from cultivation. It is thought to be derived from a wild piper species (P. wichmanii), native to northern Vanuatu, a place where researchers have identified hundreds of different selections of kava each with its own distinctive combination of appearance and particular balance of active ingredients and hence inebriating properties. Kava was likely distributed widely in early times by mariners to islands throughout Polynesia, Melanesia, and Micronesia.

The first report by outsiders of kava's use comes from Captain Cook's voyage to the Pacific in 1768-1771.

According to Cook's account, natives chewed or pounded the root and mixed it with water to produce a thick brew, which they then consumed for its subtle psychoactive properties particularly during ceremonies where religious, political and social issues were discussed.

The root of kava contains the highest concentration of the active ingredients called kavalactones, known only from the kava plant and its purported ancestor. The preparation of kava is time-consuming and requires much effort. The roots are harvested after a minimum of 18 months of growth. Older roots are said to have stronger effects. Then follows the cleaning of the roots and extensive pounding to break up the tissues and release the active ingredients.

Common effects of the kava drink include a state of relaxation, reduced muscle tension, and feelings of peacefulness, contentment, and sociability. While the body may feel very relaxed, mental alertness is not affected.

As a medicinal plant, kava has therapeutic value for anxiety and stress, menopausal symptoms, urinary tract infections, muscle aches and spasms, gastrointestinal disorders, chronic fatigue syndrome, as an anti-seizure medicine, painkiller, blood-thinner, and as an anti-inflammatory agent.

In the past year there have been several reports of individuals in Europe or the US with liver damage after consuming kava on a regular basis. However, there are many people in the Pacific islands who have consumed kava on a daily basis for almost a lifetime with no apparent liver damage. To be safe, people with liver problems should probably not take kava. Additionally, one should not drive after indulging in kava, and kava and alcohol do not mix.

At The Arboretum, three types of kava are established in the nursery greenhouses. Plans call for putting kava on display in the public Tropical Display Greenhouse, as well as in the Herb Garden.

ETHNOBOTANICAL LECTURE SERIES

"THE ETHEREAL EPIPHANY OF MAMA COCA[INE]: ETHNOBOTANY OF ERYTHROXYLUM SPECIES"

On Wednesday, December 11, Jonathan Ott, an authority in the field of psychoactive plants and mushrooms, including shamanic inebriates, or entheogens used for millennia by traditional societies, will speak on his research and travels in South America and the ethnobotanical history of coca. The lecture will start at 7:30 pm in Ayres Hall.

Mr. Ott is a spellbinding speaker, and the evening promises to be an entertaining and informative overview of the long and fascinating ethnobotanical history of coca.

A widely published expert in the field, Jonathan Ott has carried the entheogenic movement a giant step forward with his scholarly masterpiece of entheogenic plant science, Pharmacotheon. Considered a must have for those interested in entheogens, Ott introduces the word "entheogenic", which means substances which create spirit or god within us.

Tickets for each lecture are $10 for Arboretum members, $12.00 for non-members and $8.00 for students with identification.

2003 BRINGS A NEW ADVENTURE TO THE ARBORETUM... "FAMILY ADVENTURES"

It's Family Adventure time, beginning January 4, 2003, on the 1st Saturday of each month at 2:00 pm in the afternoon, under the BIG Oak Tree in front of Ayres Hall.

Each Saturday will have a different theme relating to nature or the environment, and will include a variety of activities such as a short story or talk, a walk to a special part of The Arboretum, as well as a take-home nature craft activity. Don't miss out on this exciting new family class taught by Lisa Beach.

HOLIDAY WISH LIST: CHILDREN'S BOOKS

Our children's program is in need of children's books. We are interested in early reader story or picture books for 5-8 years of age that are related to subjects on plants, the earth, the environment, nature, sports, animals, adventures, and history.

Books can be gently used or new. Please drop off any donations you would like to make at The Arboretum's Membership Office. Thank you!

NEW WEEKEND SERIES— GARDENING 101

SCOTT DAIGRE & CATHERINE DOWNES TO TEACH THE ABC'S OF GREAT GARDENING!

On the 3rd Sunday of each month, from 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm, Scott Daigre and Catherine Downes, both formerly of Hortus, teach beginning gardeners all the secrets of great gardeners. Get the dirt on soils, discuss great plants, learn basic botany and easy tips plus the basics of pruning, planting, watering and even design! This series will teach you the basics for becoming a great gardener!

Scott and Catherine bring their incredible backgrounds and experience to this Arboretum class. Considered among the "best" of garden educators, aside from their success at Hortus, they each have their own active businesses and have appeared on many gardening programs on both radio and television, been featured in national and local gardening publications and have been "garden expert" speakers and taught many classes throughout the Los Angeles area.

Winter Series 2003 dates are Jan. 19, Feb. 16, and March 16. Spring Series 2003 dates are April 20, May 18, June 22. Cost is $45 members / $52 non-members for each series. For reservations call Jill Berry at 626-821-4624.

JUST FOR KIDS

ARBORETUM ADVENTURES...PURE POETRY!

The 2002 Arboretum Adventures Kid's program was full of fun. Kids explored, discovered and learned throughout the summer months.

Kids attending the "Lost & Found: Art from the Garden" and "Puddles, Ponds, Pools & Pollywogs" programs learned to write about their experiences in a poetry form called "cinquain." A cinquain is an American form of poetry, influenced by Japanese haiku, that is written using a recipe of words and syllables to express brief thoughts and statements. Carl Sandburg helped to make this form of poetry popular.

Most cinquain poems consist of a 22-syllable stanza of five lines in the following general format:

Line One: Two syllables, one word to name the subject

Line Two: Four syllables, two words, describing the subject

Line Three: Six syllables, three action words

Line Four: Eight syllables, four or five words, expressing a feeling

Line Five: Two syllables, another word for the title.

Here are the two creative cinquains from the five to eight year-old camp adventurers! Sometimes it is called a diamond poem because of how it looks when written.

"A LATE SUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM"

GARDEN DINNER BENEFIT HIGHLIGHTS

On Sunday, September 8, The Arboretum hosted its first ever evening benefit on the lawn of the historic Queen Anne Cottage.

Arriving guests were welcomed at the historic Santa Anita Depot entrance to the sounds of the Toby Holmes Orchestra.

Hors d'oeuvres, cocktails, and fellowship kicked-off the evening at the historic Queen Anne Cottage fountain and lawn area. The Queen Anne Cottage was open for viewing.

A botanical art exhibit of selected plein air paintings was displayed on the lawn area surrounding the cottage.

Cost for each individual seminar is $35; $90 for 4 seminars; $120 for all 8 series seminars. To register for seminars or to be added to the mailing list to receive information on the Winter and Spring Series, please contact Jill Berry at 626-821-4624 or at jill.berry@arboretum.org.

NEW WORKSHOP NOVEMBER 9

PAINTING LEAF IMPRESSIONS WORKSHOP

This new Arboretum workshop will teach you how to use painted leaves to creatively and uniquely decorate holiday gifts such as napkins, place mats, tablecloths, and even denim shirts! The workshop, taught by Cathy Mac Kinney, is on Saturday, November 9 from 1:00-3:00pm in Lecture Hall B.

There are a few things you will need to bring to this class:

- 1) Freshly gathered leaves: the flatter the leaf the more easily you will be able to apply paint and create an impression
- 2) Practice fabric - an old pillow case or table napkin will work great
- 3) 4 cloth napkins - launder your napkins, dry them without fabric softener and iron them without spray sizing or starch

The cost of the workshop is $15 for members, $18 for non-members. A $3 materials fee for supplies and tools is payable to the instructor on the day of the class.

'Tis the Season! At the Queen Anne Cottage

*Decorated with originality and warm nostalgic memories of the past, the Victoria-era
Queen Anne Cottage will be open to all Arboretum
visitors on Sunday,
December 8, from 10:00AM to 4:00PM.*

Celebrate the magic of the holidays with us!

Members of Los Voluntarios, The Arboretum's volunteer organization, each year decorate the cottage with historic holiday treasures. This year they will treat visitors to wreath-making demonstrations, utilizing a variety of natural materials gathered from The Arboretum's grounds.

The historic Santa Anita Depot will also be open to the public. Tours are free with regular Arboretum admission.

Get the Holiday Spirit on December 8.
